Dear LifeGuard:

Safe Ride Solutions training staff members are experts in the prevention of driving while under the influence (DUI). As a law enforcement professional for over 17 years, I have extensive experience in alcohol related criminal offenses and have arrested over 200 drivers for DUI. I have also had specialized training in law enforcement grade "preliminary alcohol sensors" (PAS) and police breathalyzer machines called "Intoxilizers."

Safe Ride Solutions has thoroughly tested many portable breath alcohol testers with negative, disappointing results. Many of the devices on the market do not accurately record blood alcohol content (BAC), which do more harm than good. These other devices also do not have safeguards in place to prevent false readings. With some devices, the novelty game was seeing how intoxicated you could get and still get past these device's readings. I have seen subjects twice the legal limit (BAC .16) get a reading of .06 with these substandard devices. You can imagine the danger of this situation had it not been just a controlled test.

After extensive testing with your LifeGuard device, I can say your breath alcohol tester is the best I have seen in the market. We conducted countless tests with all types of alcohol, from beer to wine to cocktails. We took into account subjects' body weight, during of drinks, alcohol content, etc. Your device's readings were accurate test after test. We also verified and watched your device give accurate readings as our test subjects sobered up.

As experts in this field, we attempted to cause a false reading by inhaling into your device or blowing improperly. On every occasion your device caught the test deficiency and simply notified the user on how to correct the problem. Your device is very user friendly, compact and came with a simple set of instructions. I was impressed you instruct your consumers to abstain from eating, drinking, and smoking for 15 minutes, exactly as we do in law enforcement prior to a formal breath test. You also offer recalibration of portable devices every year. This tells me LifeGuard is committed to getting the most accurate results for its consumers.

As a law enforcement officer and an expert in DUI prevention, I firmly stand behind your product and recommend it for Safe Ride Solution clients nationwide. Thank you for doing your part to prevent impaired driving nationwide.
